

Emsisoft acquires Online Armor!

Emsisoft in Austria is well known for its award winning Anti-Malware range of products - including the products Anti-Malware and Mamutu. Over the last two years Emsisoft has also been marketing the German version of the Online Armor Firewall from Tall Emu in Australia. The collaboration between the two companies has worked so well that Emsisoft will now completely acquire the Online-Armor section from Tall Emu, including the entire developer team.

Salzburg, July 2010 - Emsisoft was founded in 2003 and now has 20 employees working intensively to develop security systems for Windows PCs. The Emsisoft Anti-Malware anti-virus software and the Mamutu behavior blocker are their flagship products.

Emsisoft Anti-Malware uses two different scanners that work hand in hand to detect and destroy over 4 million different types of software pests. Viruses, Trojans, Rootkits, Spyware Tools and other destructive programs have no chance to infiltrate your computer. Workplace security has been further improved by combining the scanners with behavior-based program analysis and surf protection. Anti-Malware has repeatedly won first place in international comparison tests, often leaving the entire anti-virus competition way behind.

Mamutu operates entirely using behavior-based program analysis and detects damaging software on the user's computer through the detection of destructive code elements or inappropriate behavior. This allows the detection of new Malware for which signatures are not yet available.

The Online Armor Firewall was invented and developed by Tall Emu in Australia. This program ensures that only programs explicitly approved by the user have access to the local network or Internet. Other modules have been added to the classical Firewall features, such as Web protection, an Online Banking mode and protection against undesired Autostarts.

After marketing the German version of Online Armor for about one year, Emsisoft have decided to spring the big surprise on July 1, 2010: Emsisoft will take over the top product Online Armor. The developer team will also be taken over to ensure that those responsible for the current excellent product can continue improving the software without interruption.

Christian Mairoll, the General Manager of Emsi Software GmbH, says: "The Online Armor Firewall is a perfect enhancement to our security software and expands our product range in exactly the right direction. Online Armor is already regarded as one of the world's best Firewalls for private users. The users can rest easy in the knowledge that they will now have two top security products from the same source that are directly matched to each other."

Emsisoft is celebrating the takeover by offering Anti-Malware and Online Armor Premium bundled together at a discount of 50 percent. In short: Anyone interested in one of the two programs will receive the other program for free.
